

It is hardly probable that Mr. Hayes will write the history of his administration.

From the recent discoveries made in Washington, it takes one administration to find out another.

The richest joke yet perpetrated on Tom Nichol, is that he has quit politics, and gone into the banking business. That will make everybody in Wisconsin smile.

Forty-five million dollars is the sum wanted from Congress to extend the Hennepin canal from Hennepin to Rock Island, a distance of 65 miles, and to improve the present canal so as to open up the Northwest and Upper Mississippi to the seaboard at New York by canal from Rock Island to Chicago.

"The man who reaches the lofty dignity of President of the United States should put bitterness behind him," says the Inter Ocean. But why doesn't it also say that the man who assumes the dignity of a United States Senator should put all bitterness behind him, and not plead the baby act. The Inter Ocean would have it just right had it been said both of these things.

There comes a report from Washington that President Garfield will neither listen to nor read newspaper criticisms upon his official acts. The only reading the President gets from the press relative to himself, is what one of his secretaries clips from the papers and lays upon his desk. Of course extracts and editorials thus clipped, are flattering to the administration. By this means the President obtains only a one-sided view of public opinion regarding his official conduct. While General Grant was President he would not read a newspaper attack upon himself, and became outraged in feeling at everything that was said in opposition to him. Lincoln was quite different. He read almost everything, and the sharper the criticism the better he was pleased and the heartier he would laugh. He made a point to get at both sides of the question, to study the sentiment of the country whether it was for or against him. In this way he became a strong President, and was vastly profited by the criticisms which appeared in some of the leading newspapers. If President Garfield would spend an hour each day in glancing over the editorial pages of the strong papers published in this country, it would do him more good than all the counsel he could obtain from the friends of the administration.

Men of brains and great political distinction sometimes do strange things. It is not always that "greatness," in the general meaning of that term, carries about with it practical wisdom and common sense, or what Mr. Lincoln used to call it, solid horse sense. Three of the most conspicuous and distinguished political characters in this country have practically turned out to be blunderheads. They are President Garfield, ex-Senator Conkling, and Secretary Blaine. We presume it would be exceedingly difficult for the President to satisfactorily explain why a change was made in the New York custom house, and probably it would be a delicate piece of business for him to give an honest and frank account of the influence which secured the appointment of Judge Robertson. Robertson is an excellent man, competent, and all that, and the President has the right, as well as the power, to nominate whomever he pleases, but in view of the fact that promises were made that Merritt should not be removed and a new man put in his place without consultation with certain parties as to the best course to pursue, it was a blunder, as the Gazette has always claimed, to re-open the custom house fight. Merritt made a good officer, there was no desire for a change. Hayes and Conkling had a bitter fight over his confirmation, and Hayes won in the contest, and the President should have known that the nomination of the leader of any faction in New York for the custom house would have created a division in the party. Mr. Conkling made a blunder, and a very serious one, when in a fit of madness he resigned his position in the Senate to show his contempt for the administration. Had he been "sick and disgusted" with political life, and wanted to return to his law practice, his resignation would not only have been timely, but it would have been the act of an independent, high-minded, honest man. But the ink with which his resignation was written is hardly dry, before he enters the contest for re-election, and is bringing every power within his reach to win a victory! This is the strangest thing of all, and it strikes the majority of sober, thinking men, as an extremely bad move on the part of Mr. Conkling, because the result is doubtful. It is not certain that he will be elected, or that any Republican will be elected at this session of the Legislature. The resignation has put the party in a worse condition in New York than it has been placed for years, and the serious question is, was Mr. Conkling justified in doing this mischief? Mr. Blaine comes in for his share of the blame in this unfortunate fight. He hates Conkling, and Conkling hates Blaine in return. There is hardly a doubt, if recent reports be true, that the Secretary had something to do with the custom house change. He is a great fighter and fights indiscreetly, very often. No doubt it afforded him an immense amount of enjoyment to see a personal enemy of Conkling's put in the custom house. Anything that annoys the ex-Senator from New York, proves a feast to Mr. Blaine, and herein is where he blunders. So high an officer as a Secretary of State, should be above the work of laying schemes to wound the feeling of another public officer or in anywise cover him with humiliation. This is not the way which leads to greatness. It is not a course which will bring honor. It does not lead to the Presidency. It is not the way to build up a party and making it strong and harmonious. It leads to dishonor, party disruption, and political defeat.

TOLLING BELLS.

One Hundred and Fifty Funerals Yesterday.

LONDON, Ont., May 26.—Early this morning the funeral bells on the city hall, the engine houses, and the churches began their mournful tolling. The pent-up agony of yesterday afternoon broke forth afresh. From a little after sunrise until the shadows of night had fallen, the streets leading to the different cemeteries were crowded with funeral processions. There were not hearse enough in the city whereon to remove the dead to their last resting place, and extra ones were brought in from the neighborhood and villages. The country people who, by marriage or closer relation, are connected with the bulk of the city's inhabitants, flocked in town with wagons, buggies, and on horseback. The early trains on the different railroads brought their quota of sorrowing friends. The citizens, wearing crepe on their left arm, moved solemnly to and fro. The living and dead had been excellent friends, and so great was the anxiety of the former to pay their tribute of respect to the memory of the latter, that it was not infrequently met late in the afternoon, groups of old citizens who during the day had attended six or eight funerals.

Unforeseen accidents of course, caused innumerable delays, and frequently, when the hearse failed to put in their appearance at the appointed hour, the friends of the deceased were obliged to take an express wagon or a grocer's cart to convey the remains to the city of the dead. About 25 internments were made yesterday, fully 150 to-day, and to-morrow there will be about twenty. All day long there was a suspension of business in almost every department of active life. The stores were all closed; silent were the workshops and manufactories. The saloons and other places of public resort were sealed.

From the tops of the prominent buildings floated flags at half mast, trimmed with crepe. It was next to impossible for the reporters to find persons whom they sought in the search for news. The entire population was attending the funerals of those who had perished, and at the present writing (10 o'clock) internments are being made by the light of torches and lanterns. Incredible as it may seem, there were those who had neither respect for the dead nor mercy for the living.

A mob of young pirates flocked around the scene of the catastrophe, while hero men were periling their lives in search of the bodies of the victims, and stole whatever they could lay their hands on. Coats, umbrellas, canes, watches, and money were taken from the clothing of those engaged in the work of charity. In two or three instances the pockets of dead were rifled of their contents.

ALBANY NEWS.

No Caucus—The Administration Men Laugh at the Stalwart Statement—Conkling's Personal Appeal.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 26.—The caucus was not held to-night, as the Conkling men two days ago announced it would be. As this has been the chief feature of their campaign, the mere fact that it was not held is a sufficient proof that fifty-four signatures were not obtained. The ex-Senator's friends, however, assert to-night that fifty-seven Republicans have signed the call, and that a caucus will be held some time before next Tuesday, probably on Monday night. Postmaster Creigh, of this city, one of Boss Sayre's proteges, said to-night: "I understand that fifty-seven men have signed the call, and eleven or twelve more have signified their intention of attending the caucus when it is called. I don't know when that will be,—probably on Monday night, possibly to-morrow." Another machine man, who is close in the councils of the leaders, said: "There will be no caucus to-night. Three more than a majority of the Republicans have signed the paper, but it was impossible to have the caucus this evening, as there was not sufficient time to notify all the members. The administration men laugh at these statements, and are positive that not more than forty-seven men have appended their names. Assemblyman Hurd, one of the signers asserts that enough of the Republicans have not yet been secured. Another Assemblyman whose signature is on the document states that there are fifty-five signers. It is difficult to say which is correct, but it is evident that the Stalwarts do not look over happy. Mr. Conkling has been personally soliciting members to support his cause. The following is a specimen of the kind of notes he sent to-day to numerous Assemblymen and Senators: MY DEAR SIR: I would like a few minutes' conversation with you as soon as may be, at a time and place of your convenience. Will you let me hear from you? Cordially yours, ROSCOE CONKLING.

CONKLING.

No Quarrels with Vice-President Arthur But they Take a Walk Arm-in-Arm Just the Same.

NEW YORK, May 26.—A dispatch from Albany says: The fact has leaked out, and is creating some excitement among those who know it, that the person whom Senator Conkling was angrily denouncing this evening was none other than Vice President Arthur. Ex-Senator Conkling's utterance were so vehement they seem to have traveled far enough to be heard by persons near at hand. It is stated that he said among other things: "You have subjected me to three defeats at the hands of one man in twelve months," apparently meaning Judge Robertson, and referring to Chicago, Washington, and Albany. "There were three things," he said, "you should have done." Here he enumerated them. "And now you have dragged me up here, and here I am like a ward politician, trying to carry a caucus." The fact that Mr. Conkling has been quarreling with his friends is considered a strong proof that he knows his case to be hopeless. Rumors of the reported scene between Mr. Conkling and Vice-President Arthur spread so rapidly that the hotels were soon full of it, and word got back to them. General Arthur and Mr. Conkling both denied with some vehemence that any such occurrence had taken place. A few moments since Mr. Conkling and General Arthur walked down stairs in the Delavan house arm in arm, went out on the street for a block, then came back arm in arm and vanished up stairs.

A WET JUNE.

Venor Predicts a Wet June—Some Frost and Some Heat.

MONTREAL, Canada, May 24.—A. A. Abbott, Esq., Chicago.—DEAR SIR:—Frosts are probable in many sections between the 25th and 28th of May. The "north waters" are only coming down now, which is an indication of a wet June. The warmest part of June is likely to occur between the 20th and 25th, when the heat may be excessive. June will be marked by frequent severe thunder storms, and frosts are probable between the 5th and 10th of the month. I may send you some future notes shortly. Respectfully yours, HENRY G. VENDOR.

HUSBAND VS. WIFE.

OCONOMOWOC, May 26.—The trial of Mrs. Joe Griffith on a warrant sworn on by her husband for an alleged attempt to kill him came off yesterday before District-Attorney Thomas, of Pewaukee, and she was bound over to the December term of the circuit court. Last Thursday night he entered the house of his father-in-law, where his wife had sought refuge from his threats, and attempted to get his child. His wife opposed, and in the tussle a revolver was discharged, which took effect in his knee.

AN INVESTIGATION.

GREEN BAY, May 26.—A. J. Turner, State railroad commissioner, arrived here this evening, having occupied two days in making an official investigation of the Green Bay & Minnesota railroad. He expressed much surprise in finding the road in such good condition after having heard so many detrimental reports. He found the bridges substantial and in good repair, the road well ballasted, thousands of ties laid, and a large amount of steel rails. Mr. Turner will make his report in a week, or as soon as he can get time.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

Photography as a Means of Detecting Criminals.

THERE are many striking instances of the value of pictures to assist in the detection of criminals. The venerable Mrs. Ogden Hoffman was once robbed of her pocketbook on the rear platform of a Fourth Avenue car. She was positive that she could pick out the man who robbed her, and, on visiting the Rogues' Gallery, instantly picked out the picture of a well-known thief named Fatty Dolan, the companion of Red Leary, who was detected picking pockets at the Paris Exposition, and served five years in a French prison. Inspector Byrnes caused the arrest of Dolan, and not long afterward, by some mysterious channel, Mrs. Hoffman's watch was returned. The famous English swindler, Lord Beresford, was recognized walking on Broadway with an elegantly dressed lady by Detectives Dusenbury and Radford. His lordship was highly indignant, and protested against the action of the detectives as an outrage. He was confronted with his picture, however, which had been sent here from England, and the lady was advised to go home. In March, 1876, Detectives Fields and Connor arrested a Vermont murderer named George Miles, alias Bliss, who was recognized by a picture sent here by the Vermont authorities. The same officers arrested in the same way Dave Jones, an escaped burglar, from Boston, whose picture was sent here from Boston, with the information that he would probably visit this city. The picture of Henry Shattou, a Michigan forger, caused his arrest here in 1878, and he was sent home to get a sentence of fourteen years, which he is now serving. Dave Mooney and his partner "Frenchy," who had robbed a man in Boston and escaped to this city, were recognized by their pictures and sent back. The business is now so systematized that in the case of a disappearing criminal it is but the work of a few hours to print a full description of him, accompanied by his photograph. It was by one of these circulars that Andrew Gillen, the murderer of Mary Sigerson, last November, was recognized and arrested in Cedar Keys.

Detectives Hines and Von Gerichten recently recognized in Fulton Street, solely by their pictures, two brothers, John and Edward Delaney, who were guilty of robbing a school up town. Some of the stolen property was found in their possession, and Inspector Byrnes got hints for the discovery of more at their home. It is now a very common thing for foreign Governments to send to the State Department pictures of escaped criminals who should be extradited. From one of such pictures, in 1877, Detective Von Gerichten arrested an Austrian forger, Augustus Bassler, who had obtained $50,000. When the notorious Sherry Mike stole $12,000 worth of silk in Washington his picture was sent here, and Detectives King and Lyon recognized him in the street. In August, 1879, Louise Miller stole $1,200. The victim had her picture, and gave it to the police. One day Detective Williamson spied the accused woman walking in Wall Street, recognizing her by her picture in the gallery. He arrested her, and she got a sentence of four years. In September, 1875, Detectives Adams and Gerichten arrested John Welch and Brick Malone on pictures sent here from Buffalo. The culprits got twenty years' sentence each for masked burglary. John Kern, an Albany burglar, was recognized in this city in 1878 by his picture, and on being sent home got a sentence of twenty-five years. At the time of the Planet Mills robbery in Brooklyn, several citizens identified the pictures of Dave Hunt and Bill Bartlett as men who had been seen about the premises. Detectives Radford and Hanley arrested them and they got twenty years each.

There is one picture in the gallery that is of interest to housekeepers. It is that of a celebrated servant thief, Annie Riley, a demure, modest, intelligent-looking girl, who gives perfect satisfaction about eleven days, and then runs away with whatever valuables she can lay hands on. The last time her picture was identified she got a two years' sentence. Julius Strang, the Pittsburgh forger of $18,000, was arrested by Detective Dorsey, in 1877, on a picture sent here from Pittsburgh. In the same year Dorsey and Adams arrested on a picture John Moloney and William Rowland, two San Francisco thieves, who had stolen $22,000, and escaped to this city. Three Chicago thieves, Johnny Curran, James Roberts, and James Cunningham, who had stolen $12,000 and escaped to this city, were captured on pictures by Detectives Dorsey and Riley.

These and hundreds of other similar cases have so signalized the value of pictures that no criminal is permitted to go without some sort of a likeness by which he may be traced. They are of inestimable value in furnishing aid to the authorities on the trial of criminals. There is a regular system of book-keeping, and records which enable Inspector Byrnes to furnish at a minute's notice the history of any prominent criminal. Each is known by a number, and each arrest and conviction is recorded in a book.

Not long ago application was made to have the picture of a banco stealer taken out of the gallery on the ground that he had reformed, and was earning $1,000 a year as a book-keeper in an honest business. The next day a British officer complained that he had been robbed of a $400 check, and recognized the reformed criminal's picture as that of the man who had assisted in the robbery. The complainant, however, finally declined to appear, because of his fear of publicity. Many rogues escape in this way, as the victims would rather let the culprits go free than to subject themselves to ridicule or blame for their cupidity.

Not long ago the cashier of the Merchants' National Bank of Boston took a look through the Rogues' Gallery to find three men who had robbed the bank of $18,000 by forged checks. George Bell, Henry Cleary and Al Wilson were picked out, and Inspector Byrnes caused their arrest. They were convicted. Charley Adams, the Charlestown Bank robber, was identified by his picture by Detective Adams, and was sent back for a sixteen years' sentence. Adams looked more like a respectable clergyman than a thief. The interchange of pictures by the police of different cities is constantly practiced, and before long there will doubtless be an international interchange of rogues' physiognomies.—New York Sun.

A Troublesome Invention.

We have no words of blame for Mr. Bottleswasher. He meant well. He got sick of wading through the mud on crossings and so he invented his street-crosser. It was a tremendous spring located in the toe of each of a pair of overshoes. When the wearer stepped his foot down flat it didn't work, but when he arose on tip-toe the spring jumped him clear across the street. Mr. Bottleswasher started out to try the invention. The first attempt he made was at Park Square, and the spring wasn't strong enough to clear it, but set him down with great violence square in a puddle, and he got badly splattered. But he wasn't discouraged. He tried it on Bromfield Street, which is narrow. That time the spring seemed to have more force, for it shot him clear across the street and through the open door of an eating-house, and he came in such violent contact with a man who sat with his back to the door that both he and the table went over, and both gentlemen were mixed up with the dinner on the floor. The upset man had to be held while things were explained, and even then said if it was tried again anybody would get hurt. Then Bottleswasher went out and tried the thing on Tremont Street, and that time he just cleared the street and upset a fat man on the side where he alighted. The fat man proposed to stab him, and could with difficulty be pacified. This broke Bottleswasher's heart, and he took off the overshoes and gave them to Count Fondowiski, an Italian nobleman, who collects bottles, rags, etc., about the street. Mr. Bottleswasher didn't explain the invention to the Count, who put on the overshoes. He started off, and coming to a crossing, proposed to tip-toe across. As he was stooping over, with his pack on his back, the result was that he was not jumped across the street, but sent across by seven somersaults and ten hand-springs, while the air was just filled with bottles, rags, etc., from his pack. He threw six people and a dog when he reached the sidewalk. A policeman grabbed him and lifted him up on tip-toe. The spring worked, and both were hurled into the mud and got their mouths full of it. The officer got him to the station at last, but had a hard time of it; and two jailers, trying to get him down stairs, got him there and themselves, too, in sudden order. Then they discovered what the matter was. The Count was released and has sworn a vendetta against Mr. Bottleswasher, and when he gets well will see that gentleman.—Boston Post.

High-Prized Fruit—What Early San Franciscans Paid for It.

For the following items relative to the first introduction and sale of fruits in California, says the Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise, we are indebted to Mr. John Piper, the well-known theatrical manager of this city, who was the first fruit-dealer in San Francisco, and who came to that city from New York in the steamer Oregon in the month of April, 1853. Mr. Piper says that the first box of apples of Pacific Coast production which reached San Francisco came in the same year from the ranch of Lewis Allen and Mr. Meade, in the vicinity of Portland, Ore., the owners of the same having crossed the plains in 1846 and having brought fruit trees with them.

Mr. Piper purchased the first lot from the agent, Mr. King, for $2.50 per pound, and retailed the same from $1 to $4 and even $5 apiece. The next steamer, the Columbia, brought another box, for which Mr. Piper offered the same price, which was declined. He finally secured the lot for $1.12 1-2 each and sold them again to two lads named Keeling (now in the gunsmith business in San Francisco) for $1.37 1-2 apiece, who in turn peddled them out for $3 to $5 apiece.

During the winter of 1853-54 Mr. Piper and Mr. Andrews, who were then engaged in the hardware business on Davis Street, ordered four or five thousand pounds of apples shipped from New York City to San Francisco by steamer, paying 50 cents per pound for freight. The apples were packed in sawdust in closed tin cans. Says our informant: "The apples when first opened had a delicious flavor, but turned black in half an hour afterward from the effect of the heat during the twenty days' voyage." Mr. Piper adopted a suggestion from some one to preserve the apples by picking them in salt water, and sold them pickled for 50 cents apiece, at which price they were readily disposed of. The fruit dealer noticed, however, that customers, after taking one bite, would generally throw away the apple in the plaza (Portsmouth Square). He was afterward advised to bake the pickled apples, by way of variety, and actually sold several hundred dollars' worth baked for 50 cents apiece.

The first lot of peaches which reached San Francisco, 1854, came from Mr. Hill's ranch at Napa, and sold as high as $2.50 per pound, retail. Cherries of Oregon growth were introduced the same year. Mr. Piper purchased the first lot for $2.50 per pound. Putting them in a clothes-basket he retailed them on the street for 25 cents apiece, and afterward sold them in his store for $5 per pound.

Strawberries arrived from Alameda in 1854-5, and cost $4 a pound, wholesale, and heaped up in French soup-bowls, holding a half-pound each, were retailed for $5 per bowl. Peas, which came in to market about the same time, were sold at a high figure. Mr. Piper remembers getting $11 for a single pea. The first lot of grapes which came from Los Angeles sold at wholesale as high as 25 cents per pound. In 1856, Mr. Piper bought 5,000 boxes on the steamer Senator, just arrived in San Francisco, and took them to Sacramento and Marysville, where he was compelled to dispose of them for less than the freight charges, the hot weather having nearly ruined the entire lot. On the return trip a cargo of watermelons, obtained from a rancher for 25 cents apiece, were sold in San Francisco at prices ranging as high as $1.

Oranges, which were first brought by steamer from San Juan, the terminus of the route of the Nicaragua steamers in 1854, brought $90 per 1,000 wholesale. Limes brought up from Acapulco were worth $60 per 1,000; pine-apples, $40 per 1,000; bananas, $25 a bunch. Mr. Piper continued in the fruit trade from 1853 to 1858. Among the retail dealers during that period were Marco Medina and undertaker Wilson, of this city.

Mr. Piper, after continuing two years longer in the grocery business in San Francisco, took up his permanent residence in this city. Among his best customers while in the fruit business were Michael Reese, Captain Folson and W. H. Rhodes ("Claxton"), and a host of others whose names we have not space to enumerate.

DISSOLUTION.

The partnership heretofore existing under the firm name of Hodge & Burdick is this day dissolved by mutual consent. The business will be settled up by the old firm, either being authorized to receipt in settling business of said firm. All persons indebted to us are requested to call and settle within thirty days from date, after that date all unsettled matters will be left for collection. All parties having claims against us will present the same for payment at once.

HERMAN BUCHHOLZ.
Dated Janesville, May 23d, 1881.

READ THIS.

Having purchased Mr. Hodge's interest in the Carriage Manufacturing business, I shall continue the same at the old stand, where I shall keep a full line of Carriages, Phaetons and Buggies of my own make, and in the future continue to make a class of work equal to that ever made by the old firm. Thanking all our old friends for past favors, I extend a cordial invitation to all, and as many new customers as will favor me with a call.

Wheat Growing in California.

THE California farmer, generally plows his land and sows his wheat as soon as practicable. He can calculate with a great degree of certainty that fully six months of the year will be practically rainless; and during the remaining six months his land is prepared and crops fairly started. The soil varies from the red loam of the Sierra slope to the sandy deposits of the gray and black "adobe" along the San Joaquin and Sacramento--to the sediment and peaty soil of the tules, and from the brown gravelly loam so characteristic of Southern California to the whitish silts of the great deserts. The preparation of the ground is usually done by means of the gang-plow, and this is drawn by from three to five horses. In a large field frequently a half dozen or more of these plows may be seen at work; and these, followed by the centrifugal sower and wagon of seed-grain, together with the harrow, transform in a day forty to fifty acres of stubble into a well-seeded grain-field. On the larger ranches in the Great Valley, sometimes 50, and even 100, gang-plows may be seen in use; and to some of these are attached appliances for seeding and covering, so that the plowing is done simultaneously with the seeding and harrowing. Sometimes the seed is sown dry in summer-fallowed land before the rains set in; and this, being moistened a month or two later, yields the most handsome returns. During the seeding time thousands of acres are sown in quick succession; and the grain, springing up as if by magic, is soon ready for the harvest. Then, the miles and miles of alfalfa are often seen, ready for the scythe, and the wheat, nothing but wheat-fields are seen. There are no fences, few houses and towns; and, from the Coast Range to the Sierras, the play of color upon the waving grain shows more beautifully than the tints of the best artists. Between the seeding time and harvest the haying season occurs, and the crops gathered are of the most bountiful kind. Crops of alfalfa are often taken from the same field in a year, and this furnishes a nutritious hay for all kinds of stock.
When the wheat-harvest comes everybody is astir on a large California ranch. The territory, often embracing thousands of acres, is divided for convenience into numerous sections, and each section has its regular quota of machinery, horses and men. There are blacksmiths, carpenters, machinists, engineers, cooks and servants innumerable, while the rank and file of the men for the great companies. The scythe, cradle and reaper, so common in the East, are here scarcely known. Owing to the continued sunshine, the wheat matures rapidly, and must be cared for quickly. The implement used for cutting is the giant header, and this is pushed into the waving grain by from four to eight horses. The heads of the grain, with a few inches of straw attached, are clipped off by the vibrating cutter, and the grain is sometimes twenty-eight feet in width. A revolving apron carries the clippings to the rooky bed of a wagon driven alongside; and this is then taken to the steam thrasher, often in the same field. Several of these wagons drive back and forth between the header and thrasher, and in an incredibly short space of time the wheat is sacked and ready for shipment. Even this energetic mode of farming seems too slow for the farmers of certain sections, and we read of a wonderful combination of header, thrasher and sacking wagon moving through the waving grain, and performing the various operations as it moves. Were a millstone and cooking-stove added but little room for improvement in the future would remain. On the smaller ranches a less energetic mode of procedure is practiced. The grain is cut with a header, but is left in stack until a thrashing-machine can be obtained. The bulk of the straw in every case is left standing in the field, and this is afterward turned off or plowed under, as the fancy of the farmer may dictate. From July to November most of the interior valleys and much of the territory along the Sacramento and San Joaquin are dotted with countless stacks of wheat, and the air is resonant with the hum of steam-engines and thrashing-machines. The thrashing season, after the heading season, is the busiest of the year; and when this is over the supply of tonnage and the condition of the market are the only remaining anxiety of the farmer.
Each traveling machine has its "boss" and complement of men, and goes from one farm to another in accordance with the contracts which have been previously made. The machine itself consists of a portable steam-engine and boiler combined, a thrasher or separator, and a large platform-wagon upon which the separator is conveyed. The full complement of hands to a machine consists of thirteen, namely: engineer, fireman, separator, "boss," two forkers, three takers, feeder, sack-tender, sack-sewer, sack-measurer and straw-huck. Of these the engineer generally gets $5 a day; the separator "boss," forkers and feeder, $4; the first taker, sack-sewer, and sack-packer, $3; and the rest $2.50 or $2 per day. The work goes on unceasingly from daylight till sunset, save when there is an intermission for meals, or when a fork "accidentally" gets into the cylinder when the hands consider that they are being rushed too hard. Work on a thrashing-machine is generally considered the most severe of the harvest season; and, were there not a certain amount of jollity connected with the change of scene, and a certain incentive to work in consequence of the high wages paid, men would seek some easier means of earning their daily bread. The use of such men and gigantic machinery, coupled with the peculiar climatic conditions, and the extent of territory to be cultivated, and the peculiar feature of wheat-culture in California; and thus this industry is distinguished from the same in other parts of the world. In the Great Valley--a low, broad, and oval tract, nearly four hundred miles long by fifty wide--large ranches are the rule; and some of these are wonderful in their proportions. One of the largest of these is that of John Mitchell, who resides near its center, at Tullock, and which consists of 100,000 acres, with yearly from 25,000 to 50,000 acres in wheat. This gentleman has one warehouse with a capacity at 100,000 bushels, and has paid as high as $30,000 in a single year for sacks with which to sack his crop. His machinery and farming implements represent a fortune in themselves; and his profits in a single good season would be sufficient to purchase a considerable ranch. Many of his neighbors farm from 5,000 to 10,000 acres yearly, and these only boast of an average territory. --A. R. Whitehall, in Chicago Tribune.

An Important Surgical Discovery.

THE Cincinnati Volksblatt contains an account of a recent very remarkable surgical operation performed in Vienna. The story is taken from the Vienna Medical Wochenschrift. The operation was performed by Prof. Billroth and his students. He wrote the report of it himself, so gratified was he at his success.

The thing done was no less than the successful removal of a cancer from the stomach. Prof. Billroth calls the process "stomach resection." It involved opening the stomach, cutting out the cancer, uniting the edges again, and then watching for the result as what such a thrilling experiment means.

It had never before been performed in the history of the world, and it was successful. Cancer of the stomach is classed among incurable diseases. Sufferers from this terrible ailment are found in all classes of life. If hereafter, then, they are to be relieved and cured, what a discovery is this that Prof. Billroth has made!

Preliminary to describing the case, the Professor refers to previous experiments in this direction, which have gradually led up to the climax. He mentions that seventy years ago a young German physician, Karl Theodore Merrem, performed an interesting series of experiments on dogs. He showed that the lower orifice of the stomach could be cut away and the stomach united directly to the intestine, and recovery take place after the operation. Of three dogs treated in this manner, two survived and recovered. Even then Dr. Merrem ventured to state his conviction that a cancer could be successfully removed from the lower opening of the human stomach in this manner. At that time, though, the very close similarity between human bodies and those of other animals was not so well understood as it is now.

Neither had operative surgery progressed so far as it has since, and the experiments and the prediction of the daring young doctor fell dead upon his generation. The significance of his work was not understood.

So the matter rested for full sixty years. In 1871 Dr. Billroth himself took up the subject again, beginning his practice on dogs. (Doctors seem to have a spite at dogs.) On different occasions he cut out pieces from the alimentary canal of large dogs, drew the edges of the hole together, and had the pleasure of seeing it heal over successfully. The canal was somewhat smaller afterward at the place where the piece had been removed, but still it was easily distended.

The Professor himself, however, was not the first to apply the process to a human being. Dr. Czerny had that honor. He operated successfully on the larynx. A few years later Dr. Billroth removed some cancerous growths which had filled a human larynx. Other surgeons made yet other minor experiments. "This for the satisfaction of those who are of the opinion that my operation was only a crazy venture--some experiment on mankind," says Prof. Billroth.

The Professor and his students prepared for their great operation very carefully. Surgeons who had performed similar operations on animals had arrived at this fixed conclusion: "Stomach resection must and will succeed."

The cancer was a very large one. The Professor says he was "joyfully amazed" at the rapidity with which his patient began to recover. The form of the stomach, as he assured us, is scarcely altered by the piece that was cut out. He had expected much disturbance in the stomach and local irritation; when, therefore, everything went on in a comparatively quiet way, without any of these unfavorable symptoms, he scarcely dared believe it could continue. A relapse into the patient's former weak condition might be looked for at any time, he thought, and against this relapse could be done nothing.

A few days after the operation, at the urgent entreaty of the patient, he changed her to a large ward shared by a number of patients in common, because she found herself so lonesome in an isolated room. At first after the operation the patient was only given milk for nourishment. On the seventh day tea and coffee were added to her diet. No unpleasant effects followed. Her temperature was almost normal, and her pulse was stronger and quieter than before the operation. She slept well, and complained of no great pain. At last accounts there was every reason to look for her perfect recovery.

The story of the famous surgeon's successful operation is scarcely less interesting to the general public than to the medical profession themselves. No wonder the happy doctor is moved to say: "I hope we have again made a good step forward in the work of healing human beings hitherto regarded as incurable, or, in case of return of the cancerous affections, at least to relieve them for a period of time. You will, perhaps, pardon me if I feel a certain pride in the fact that through the labors of my students this progress has become possible."

viets were very appropriate and at their close a large number joined in following the remains to Oak Hill cemetery, where they were laid at rest.

—C. E. Ranous, T. T. Croft, Charles Atwood, and S. B. Smith have been to Beloit as a committee of the Knights of Pythias, and have secured names enough to make the organization of a lodge in that city a certainty. Arrangements have also been made by which the Knights will go to Beloit next Monday will be well cared for, and sheds have been procured for their steeds. In view of these facts it behooves the Janesville Knights to turn out in full force, and they are individually and collectively urged to report at the West Side armory, near the Chicago & Northwestern depot in Beloit, at 1 o'clock sharp next Monday.

—At a literary and musical soiree held at Whitewater Tuesday evening, Prof. Schulhoff, of this city, who has a class there, participated with several of his pupils. The professor gave a tenor solo, "Miserere of Il Trovatore," and also some readings, of which the Register says: "A novel and attractive feature was the dramatic reading and recitation of Prof. Schulhoff in four different languages, and added a great deal to the enjoyment of the evening. His voice is rich, his intonation perfect. The quickness of changes of tone in dialogue was marked, and his rendition in French of the second Act, 2d scene of Hernani was very striking."

TO-MORROW'S TREAT.

Sells Brothers' Tents to be Pitched in Janesville, Crowded with Attractions.

To-morrow Sells brothers are to spread their big canvas in this city, and the combination of big shows, each crowded with wonders, is to be thrown open to the public, at the usual prices. The crowds which have been delighted in Chicago and elsewhere, and the worlds of high praise, which come from all points where they have shown, are a sufficient assurance that the promises made on the flaming posters are to be met, and that all features of the exhibition will be startling and interesting.

Among the many wonders which are crowded into these tents are a full-grown pair of hippopotami, the largest ever shown, the great rainbow-hued mandrill; the woolly elephants; the tiny elephant, exhibited under a glass case, alive and a full grown dwarf smaller than any baby elephant ever seen; the drove of performing Colorado cattle; the great arctic aquarium containing all sorts of ice-haunting mammoths; the polar bears, two horned white rhinoceros, the herd of elephants, and caravan of dromedaries and camels, in fact a perfect bewilderment of wonders from the animal kingdom.

Then there are the arcanic wonders, James Robinson, the acknowledged champion horseback equestrian, George Kelley, the famous leaper, the Japanese circus, and the miniature circus, and a bright galaxy of equestrians, gymnasts, clowns and acrobats.

There is one blessed relief promised those who go to this big show to-morrow. They are not to be bothered with peddlers, and peanuts and lemonade will not be thrust under the noses of those who are more anxious to see the events of the ring than the advent of an annoying canvasser. Those who go will be relieved of all annoyances in this line.

The street parade to-morrow will be watched for eagerly, and with such a grouping of attractions as are promised under the canvas, the tents cannot but be filled to the utmost.

If "cleanliness is the scale of civilization," Janesville must stand high on the scale, judging from the immense quantities of toilet soaps, Prentice & Evenson have just received. For pure vegetable oil soaps go to the drug store opposite the post office.

BOHEMIAN OATS.

A case of special interest to farmers is now being tried in the circuit court, having been brought here from Dane county. The defendants, Cyrus E. Hanchett, Roswell Smith, and W. H. Dinehart, are charged with having obtained money under false pretenses, by selling to La Fayette Stowe, some Bohemian oats, or known as hullless oats, representing that the market was controlled by a farmers' association, in which each member was pledged not to sell the oats less than $10 a bushel, of 32 pounds, except by order of the association; that the oats weighed about 50 pounds to the bushel, and averaged from 40 to 87½ bushels to the acre. Stowe bought twenty bushels for seed at $10 a bushel, giving his notes in payment.

The complaining witness claims that all this was a fraud, and that the oats did not yield more than twelve bushels to the acre, that they were of no special value, and that he could buy all he wanted at a price far below $10 a bushel.

The trial of the case promises to be somewhat lengthy, and it calls together a bright galaxy of legal stars, the prosecution being represented by District Attorney R. M. La Follette, of Madison, John Winans and John R. Bennett, of this city, and for the defense, I. C. Sloan, of Madison, and J. M. Morrow, of Sparta. In getting a jury yesterday the regular panel was exhausted, and a special venire of ten was returned yesterday afternoon, but only one was needed to serve, and that one being found, the others were discharged.

OCEAN WONDERS.

Next week an aquatic museum is to be exhibited in Janesville, comprising a large number of salt water curiosities and relics of the ocean, the most startling of which is the largest articulated skeleton in the world, it being that of a mammoth whale. The skeleton is said to weigh 7,850 pounds, the skull alone weighing 1,465 pounds, and the jaw bones being fifteen feet long, and the jaw ing 675 pounds. Every bone is bolted and wired in its proper place, thus giving an accurate idea of the make-up and size of the monster. There are other curiosities and wonders in the collection also, forming an interesting exhibition. This museum is to be opened here Wednesday, June 1, and the prices of tickets will be made low, so that none need stay away on account of prices.

PLUCKED HIS PARTNER.

A Young Man Caught and Locked Up, Charged with Stealing $600 Worth of Jewelry.

About a week ago a young Jew named Freidburg, hailing from Syracuse, N. Y., arrived in the city, and began a diligent search for his former partner in business, by whom he claimed to have been robbed of a large amount of jewelry. His statement was to the effect that he and another young man named Abraham Wolinski, were in the jewelry business in New York State, and that last January they dissolved partnership, agreeing to divide up the stock, each taking one-half. The night following their making this agreement, Wolinski disappeared, and the entire stock, together with a pair of horses and a wagon owned by the firm, likewise disappeared. It was in vain that he hunted for some trace of the missing partner and property. At last he found that the partner had sold the team at a place some distance from Syracuse, giving a bill of sale of both horses, though one only belonged to him. But where he had gone with the $600 worth of jewelry was still a mystery.

His whereabouts were finally hit upon early in this month, by an unfortunate outbreak of love's passion. It seems that young Wolinski was enraptured with a Syracuse belle, whose family objected to her receiving his attentions. Her big brother on going to the postoffice one day found there a letter directed to his sister in Wolinski's handwriting. From this he learned that the young man was in Janesville, and was known here by the name of A. Davis. He at once informed Wolinski's partner, and the Chief of Police of Syracuse telegraphed the officers here to arrest him. This telegram was followed by young Freiberg, and for a week or more he and Marshal Hogan have been on the lookout.

It seems that Wolinski, alias Davis, was making his headquarters here, and traveling about the country, selling jewelry from house to house. It being learned that he was in Edgerton last night, Marshal Hogan went there, and found the young man, brought him to Janesville, and locked him up to await the necessary papers from New York.

Wolinski is a bright, active young man well dressed, and when arrested was found to be in possession of a goodly stock of jewelry, and of a fine horse and buggy, all of which he claimed he owned. He has been doing quite a thriving business, ordering goods frequently from Chicago, and seemingly prosperous in all his ways.

THE BEAUTIFUL ORIENTAL PAGEANT OF LALLA ROOKH.

Manager Forepaugh Expends $200,000 in Order to Produce It Upon the Street for a Free Public Show.

On the morning of June 24th, in addition to many other sensational features, there will be presented in the Great Forepaugh Show Parade, a beautiful and realistic representation of the Oriental Pageant illustrating the departure of Lalla Rookh from Delhi.

The great showman, Forepaugh, has expended $200,000 in order to incorporate this spectacular feature in his princely show parade. There will be represented with truly Eastern magnificence, resplendent beauty and loveliness, the departure of Lalla Rookh from Delhi for Cashmere.

Who has not heard of the Vale of Cashmere, with its roses the brightest that earth ever gave, Its temples and grottoes, and fountains as clear As the love-lighted eyes that hang over their waves?

All the scenes of oriental magnificence and grandeur recited by the immortal author of Lalla Rookh are depicted in this sublime and beautiful pageant, precisely as described by him. In response to advertisements in the leading journals in the principal cities in the United States, and for a princely salary, the Loveliest Lady in the Land has been secured to personify the beautiful eastern princess, Lalla Rookh, whom the poet describes as "more beautiful than any of those heroines whose names and loves embellish the songs of Persia and Hindoostan; more perfect than the divinest images of the House of Azor." In this gorgeous, glittering, oriental pageant, Lalla Rookh is seen reclining in her sumptuous Howdah, borne aloft upon the back of a ponderous and kingly elephant, the largest on this continent, whose embroidered velvet trappings touch the ground; a fair young female slave sits fanning the Princess through the rose colored veils, with feathers of Argus Pheasant's wings, and the lovely troop of Tartarean and Cashmerean Maids of Honor ride on each side of the Princess upon small Arabian horses. Rajahs and Mogul Lords follow, accompanied by Cavaliers in costly armor, mounted upon elephants, camels and Arabian horses, decorated in oriental trappings, and bearing aloft the royal standards,—the entire scene recalling to the beholder the glories and the grandeur of the distant Indies, the mysterious land of the Vedas, the parent of the modern world, where

In keeping with the author of Lalla Rookh's description of this grand, glittering, lavish and luxurious spectacle, are seen the Guards of the great Kedhar Khan, with their silver battle-axes and maces of gold, followed by the Great Nazir, or Chamberlain, of the Harem, and the retinue of the Court of Delhi, mounted upon elephants, camels and Arabian horses, decorated in oriental trappings, and bearing aloft the royal standards,—the entire scene recalling to the beholder the glories and the grandeur of the distant Indies, the mysterious land of the Vedas, the parent of the modern world, where

The gorgeous East, with richest hand Showers on the huge barbaric pearl and gold.

The whole forming the most magnificent, picturesque and realistic oriental spectacle ever presented in the New World. This constitutes but a single feature in the grand procession of the Great Show. More than a mile of chariots, twenty elephants, hundreds of horses, musical bands, mardi gras masquerades, and a world of famous features make up the grand parade on Friday morning, at 10 o'clock, June 24th, the grand parade of the great Forepaugh Show will take place in the streets of Janesville.

INCREDIBLE.

F. A. Scratch, druggist, Ruthven, Ont., writes: "I have the greatest confidence in your BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. In one case with which I am personally acquainted their success was almost incredible. One lady told me that half a bottle did her more good than hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine she had previously taken." Price $1.00, trial size 50 cents. Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE AND EVENSON DRUGGISTS.
